

Foreword

This study was undertaken in the context of the Development Centre's 1996–98 research programme entitled “The Reform and Growth of Large Developing Countries”. It follows earlier work published by the Development Centre by the same author under previous work programmes. Those titles were The World Economy in the 20th Century (1989) and Monitoring the World Economy, 1820–1992 (1995).

I am grateful to Jean Bonvin for inviting me to write this book for the OECD Development Centre, and for his patience in waiting for me to finish it. I was very fortunate to have Chinese friends — Gai Jianling, Meng Xin, Ren Ruoen, Wang Ziaolu, Harry X. Wu and Yang Qiu–mei who were willing to help in interpreting Chinese language material. I am grateful to Michèle Fleury–Brousse, Remco Kouwenhoven, Boon Lee, Peter van Mulligen, Aparna Rao and Ly Na Tang for help in statistical processing, and to Sheila Lionet for her skill and patience in typesetting a very difficult manuscript. The Food and Agriculture Organisation was kind enough to provide access to its data files on Chinese agricultural output. Graeme Snooks and Prasada Rao were very generous in providing comments and hospitality when I visited their universities. I received useful comments from Derek Blades, Pierre van der Eng, David Henderson, Peter Nolan, Eddy Szirmai, Victor Urquidi, Donald Wagner and from participants in seminars in the Australian National University, CEPIL, Griffith University, the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, Melbourne Business School, the University of New England, Peking University, the Reserve Bank of Australia, the School of Oriental and African Studies, the Oxford Centre for Chinese Studies, the European Historical Economics meeting in Montecatini Terme, an SSB–OECD Workshop on National Accounts and a seminar in Beijing organised by the OECD Development Centre and the Institute of Industry and Techno–economics of the Chinese State Planning Commission. My biggest debt is to my wife, Penelope Maddison, for continuous encouragement, sustained moral and material support.
